Counting Courses for More than One Requirement

Double Counting between General Education Requirements and a Major
If a General Education course is required as part of a major program of study, it does satisfy the General Education (Core Curriculum) requirement that the course would normally satisfy. If a student has taken a General Education course prior to entering a major that is different from the course specified for that major, the student must take the major-specified course in addition to the course he/she already took.

Double Counting between Majors and between Majors and Minors
When there is overlap between requirements for a major and requirements for a second major, King University will allow eight (8) semester hours to be counted in both the majors.

When there is overlap between requirements for a major (especially when the major is cross-disciplinary) and requirements for a minor in another discipline, King University will allow eight (8) semester hours to be counted in both the major and the minor.

Triple Counting Never Allowed
When there is overlap among requirements for General Education (Core Curriculum), a major, and a minor, a course that could satisfy all can only be used to satisfy two of the three.
