King University offers a select set of collegiate courses for adults ages 60 and over. The King University Campus offerings are part of the Lifelong Learning at King program in which the adult learners would audit the non-credit classes at King's main campus in Bristol, Tenn., free of charge.

Courses are taught by King professors in the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Health & Professional Sciences. The courses cover a range of subjects including history, literature, Bible, theatre, photography, intelligence studies, politics, biology, criminal justice, English, fine arts, religion, philosophy, mathematics, and music.

By auditing the selected courses, the students will be able to attend class, learning alongside the traditional students in the classroom, without worry of test-taking or cost.

Note: Books are not required for classes, but can optionally be purchased at BOOKS.KING.EDU or most online book retailers.
